

CALL MR. ROBESON: A life, with songs.

Written and Performed by Tayo Aluko, with Michael Conliffe, Piano

Forest Arts Centre, New Milton. Friday, 26 October, 2012.

Greetings and Welcome. We heard the other day of the impending closure of a Ford factory not too far away from here, and that production of their transit vans will now be transferred to Hungary, where labour is cheaper. Presumably there are one or two people here in New Milton who will be affected, and I wonder if they belong to a union? Years ago, the American food giant Krafts bought that old British institution, Cadbury's, promising to safeguard a factory and its jobs in the midlands, but no sooner had the deal been completed than the factory was closed and those jobs sent to Poland. The unions the workers and the government, had been deceived. In America, a man who would be President speaks passionately of his intention to create thousands of badly needed jobs, despite the fact that the company he once headed made and makes its billions by asset-stripping companies and shipping their jobs from America to China and other low-waged economies. Perhaps we should believe that this leopard has changed its spots, or will do so soon. Paul Robeson, for one, was remarkably consistent in stating what he believed in throughout his life. Not only did he champion workers' rights in America, he did so in the UK and, even though he never made it South of the Sahara, in Africa. He believed trade unions could be at the forefront of the liberation struggles, since the imperialist powers needed cheap labour in order to continue to exploit the colonies. For his troubles, he was branded a dangerous extremist. All these decades later, we see that workers worldwide continue to need protection from business and political leaders, and that more voices are needed to speak out in their support, rather than buying the mainstream media's line that trade unions are bad for the economy. We have examples in the Euro zone to inspire us, just as much as Robeson did. May things not get as bad as they are in Greece and Spain before enough of us join the fight. I hope you enjoy the show.

Tayo Aluko. Writer, Performer, Producer. Tayo was born in Nigeria, and now lives in Liverpool. He worked until recently as an architect and property developer, with a special but as yet frustrated interest in eco-friendly construction. As a baritone, he has sung as soloist in British concert halls accompanied by orchestra, and has also sung in Germany, Ireland and Nigeria. He has performed lead roles in such operas and musicals as Nabucco, Kiss Me Kate and Anything Goes. CALL MR ROBESON won the Argus Angel Award for Artistic Excellence and Best Male Performer Award at the 2008 Brighton Festival Fringe, two Merit Awards for Excellence in London in 2010 and three awards at the London Ontario Fringe last June. He has performed the play around the UK, the United States of America, Canada and Nigeria, and at New York's Carnegie Hall in February 2012 for his 50th birthday. His other piece titled FROM BLACK AFRICA TO THE WHITE HOUSE: a talk about Black Political Resistance, illustrated with Spirituals has also been performed in three continents. He researched, wrote and narrated to camera a piece on West African History before the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade, which forms part of the permanent exhibit at Liverpool's International Slavery Museum. A song from his CD, RECALLING ROBESON is featured as the July 2008 song of the month on the Labor Notes website.

Michael Conliffe, Piano and original incidental music

Mike started playing piano by ear as child, playing gospel in church and later discovering Jazz, which he went on to study at Liverpool Community College and Leeds college of Music. As well as playing regularly in Jazz festivals round the UK, Mike has toured both coasts of America with Call Mr Robeson, culminating in the February 2012 performance at Carnegie Hall with Tayo. Mike also performs in another two-hander, a Jazz drama God Bless the Child about Billie Holliday, in which he also acts. He plays regularly as soloist and with Swing and Function bands at weddings, other celebrations and at corporate events. Mike also teaches piano to aspiring Pop, Blues and Jazz musicians and to singer/song writers.
