

CALL MR. ROBESON: A life, with songs.

Written and Performed by Tayo Aluko, with Dennis Nelson, Piano
Lackland Center, Centenary College, Hackettstown, NJ. Thursday, Nov 12, 2015

Greetings, Welcome. Almost a hundred years ago, a young man from Princeton, NJ became an All-American Football player two years in a row. He went on to play professionally to help him through law school. It is therefore fitting that there's a football stadium named after him in this State, and that it hosts the annual High School Football competition called the Paul Robeson Classic. The event is sometimes a last opportunity for young men from New Jersey to get noticed by talent scouts on the extremely lucrative College Football circuit. The serious money is made not by the players (that may come to some when they turn professional) but by the coaches, the colleges and those who operate and profit from the game. The strike by Black players and students in protest against systemic racism in their university succeeded because it threatened the financial interests of those who benefit from the labour of the players, which was why it didn't take long for them to meet the strikers' demands and secure the university president's resignation. A crucial factor in the success of the action was the fact that the coach, many white students and many faculty stood in solidarity with the strikers, making it impossible for the authorities to ignore them any longer. This brings to mind the Civil Rights Movement, which would never have achieved what it did without millions of people of all races joining Black people in their struggle, some losing their lives in the process. It brings to mind the Montgomery Bus Boycott, which succeeded precisely because the economy of the city was brought to a standstill by the united action of thousands. It also brings to mind everything Paul Robeson stood for, and why he was considered so dangerous: he was simultaneously committed to the Black struggle and the struggle for all working and oppressed people of the world. Not only did he blaze a trail for black footballers a hundred years ago, he spoke constantly about how collective action by workers is a tremendous force for positive change. Robeson may be resting in peace now, but there are still sleeping giants among us – in workplaces, on concert stages and football fields. Everywhere. I hope you enjoy the show.

Tayo Aluko. Writer, Performer. Tayo was born in Nigeria, and now lives in Liverpool. He worked previously as an architect and property developer, with a special but as yet frustrated interest in eco-friendly construction. He has fronted orchestras as baritone soloist in concert halls, and has also performed lead roles in operas and musicals including Nabucco, Kiss Me Kate and Anything Goes. CALL MR ROBESON has won numerous awards at festivals in the UK and Canada, as well as highly favourable reviews in the press – most notably in the Guardian and on BBC Radio 4. He has toured the play around the UK, the USA, Canada, Jamaica and Nigeria, and at New York's Carnegie Hall in February 2012 on his 50th birthday. He also delivers a lecture/concert called PAUL ROBESON – THE GIANT, IN A NUTSHELL, and another one titled FROM BLACK AFRICA TO THE WHITE HOUSE: a talk about Black Political Resistance, illustrated with spirituals has been performed in three continents. He researched, wrote and narrated to camera a piece on West African History before the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade, which forms part of the permanent exhibit at Liverpool's International Slavery Museum. His 15-minute play, HALF MOON, which also deals with ancient Africa has been performed several times in the UK. He recently developed a piece titled WHAT HAPPENS? featuring the writings of African American Langston Hughes, for performance with live jazz accompaniment. He has been published in The Guardian, The Morning Star, NERVE Magazine, Modern Ghana and Searchlight Magazine. He is currently working on a new play.

Dennis A. Nelson, Piano. Dennis Nelson studied music at the Brooklyn Conservatory of Music and is a graduate of Hofstra University. He serves as organist and choir director for Trinity Baptist Church in Brooklyn, and accompanist for the New York City Labor Chorus, in addition to accompanying various soloists and choirs. He is also a member of The New Hope Ensemble, a gospel/jazz quintet, and Instrumental Sounds Of Praise (ISOP), a gospel big band aggregation. His songs have been recorded by noted gospel and R&B singers, and he has several recording credits as keyboardist and writer.
