

CALL MR. ROBESON: A life, with songs.

Written and Performed by Tayo Aluko, with Michael Conliffe, Piano

Merlin Theatre, Frome. Tuesday, 23 October, 2012.

Greetings and Welcome. “I sat on his lap when I was about ten or eleven, and I’ve never forgotten that to this day.” ... “I’ll never forget the day he called me over, and he took my hand, and we walked down the street together.” These quotes are not the sad recollections of traumatised victims of an accomplished paedophile, but the proud memories of some of the middle aged people who have told me time and again what a wonderful impact meeting Paul Robeson had on their lives, and how much admired he was by the parents who introduced them to the big man. The second quote comes from a man who remembered Paul taking time off from performing Othello at Stratford-upon-Avon in 1958 to go on some demonstration or the other about peace, or workers’ rights. Here was a man who had been hounded for most of his political career for being too political. He was on a much delayed return to England after many years of virtual imprisonment and ill health in the USA, but came back continuing to fight and speak for the causes he had championed all those years before. Last Saturday, there were protests here in the UK for workers’ rights, jobs and pensions. I don’t recall seeing any internationally known artistes on the march or on stage, but the message that came from the trade union leaders was loud and clear enough: the economic mess we are in can be resolved, not by squeezing the workers and cutting vital services, but by having more equitable tax policies, reducing spending on war and by creating more meaningful employment for the youth of the country. It is natural for us all to seek to protect our children from dangerous adults, and we should not neglect to include cynical, self-serving politicians, capitalists and war mongers among those who should be exposed and brought to account, lest children here and elsewhere be condemned to a future blighted by damaged bodies and minds. I hope you enjoy the show.

Tayo Aluko. Writer, Performer, Producer. Tayo was born in Nigeria, and now lives in Liverpool. He worked until recently as an architect and property developer, with a special but as yet frustrated interest in eco-friendly construction. As a baritone, he has sung as soloist in British concert halls accompanied by orchestra, and has also sung in Germany, Ireland and Nigeria. He has performed lead roles in such operas and musicals as Nabucco, Kiss Me Kate and Anything Goes. CALL MR ROBESON won the Argus Angel Award for Artistic Excellence and Best Male Performer Award at the 2008 Brighton Festival Fringe, two Merit Awards for Excellence in London in 2010 and three awards at the London Ontario Fringe last June. He has performed the play around the UK, the United States of America, Canada and Nigeria, and at New York’s Carnegie Hall in February 2012 for his 50th birthday. His other piece titled FROM BLACK AFRICA TO THE WHITE HOUSE: a talk about Black Political Resistance, illustrated with Spirituals has also been performed in three continents. He researched, wrote and narrated to camera a piece on West African History before the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade, which forms part of the permanent exhibit at Liverpool’s International Slavery Museum. A song from his CD, RECALLING ROBESON is featured as the July 2008 song of the month on the Labor Notes website.

Michael Conliffe, Piano and original incidental music

Mike started playing piano by ear as child, playing gospel in church and later discovering Jazz, which he went on to study at Liverpool Community College and Leeds college of Music. As well as playing regularly in Jazz festivals round the UK, Mike has toured both coasts of America with Call Mr Robeson, culminating in the February 2012 performance at Carnegie Hall with Tayo. Mike also performs in another two-hander, a Jazz drama God Bless the Child about Billie Holliday, in which he also acts. He plays regularly as soloist and with Swing and Function bands at weddings, other celebrations and at corporate events. Mike also teaches piano to aspiring Pop, Blues and Jazz musicians and to singer/song writers.
