

CALL MR. ROBESON: A life, with songs.

Written and Performed by Tayo Aluko, with Michael Conliffe, Piano

Tristan Bates Theatre (Paul Robeson Art Is A Weapon Festival)

Tuesday 1 October, 2013.

Greetings, and Welcome. October 1 is Nigerian Independence Day. I remember once meeting another Nigerian in London who made money by taking Nigerian politicians to various Western countries to see how democracies run in “more experienced settings”. The list included the USA, where we are today learning how to shut down a government. Italy, the so-called seat of democracy, also offers interesting lessons on the consequences of ego and political intrigue. Independence of thought would therefore be useful to us Africans, and on this, the day that launches Black History Month, we could do well to look into pre-slavery and pre-colonial Africa for lessons on real democracy. The Igbo, from whom Paul Robeson is descended, are one historical example of a particularly democratic society, and there are very many others across the continent. Another obvious lesson from our history is that great empires eventually collapse. The British Empire, which was forced to relinquish power worldwide became overwhelmed by its sheer size and the aspirations of the millions of people it governed. One wonders whether what we are witnessing in the USA today is the beginning of the collapse of that particular empire, and whether historians will one day blame the African at its head for its demise. It is more likely to be the action of the citizenry reacting to the madness on Capitol Hill. Many argue that what lies at the heart of the fiasco engulfing that country today is the stupidity, bigotry and ignorance of many people in government, blinding them to the potential consequences of their actions. That a man of Paul Robeson’s genius could have been made to suffer the way he did shows that history repeats itself over and over again, but his story teaches us that many of his ideas are useful if we are to defeating mental slavery and injustice. So is education and collective action. There are few more useful and potent weapons to aid us in today’s battles than our knowledge of our great histories, of stories of heroes and heroines, or celebrations of past struggles and triumphs. In the words of the Nigerian national anthem, may the labours of our heroes past never be in vain. I hope you enjoy the show.

Tayo Aluko. Writer, Performer. Tayo was born in Nigeria, and now lives in Liverpool. He worked previously as an architect and property developer, with a special but frustrated interest in eco-friendly construction. He has fronted orchestras as baritone soloist in British concert halls, and has also performed lead roles in such operas and musicals as Nabucco, Kiss Me Kate and Anything Goes. CALL MR ROBESON won three awards at the London Ontario Fringe in June 2012 and Best Solo Show at the Stratford UK Fringe this June. He has performed the play around the UK, Canada, Nigeria, Jamaica and the USA (including New York’s Carnegie Hall in February 2012). His other piece titled FROM BLACK AFRICA TO THE WHITE HOUSE - a talk about Black Political Resistance, illustrated with Spirituals, has also been performed on three continents. He researched, wrote and narrated to camera a piece on West African History before the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade, which forms part of the permanent exhibit at Liverpool’s International Slavery Museum. His 15-minute play, HALF MOON, which also deals with ancient Africa, has been performed several times in the UK.

Michael Conliffe, Piano and original incidental music.

Mike started playing piano by ear as child, playing gospel in church and later discovering Jazz, which he went on to study at Liverpool Community College and Leeds college of Music. As well as playing regularly in Jazz festivals round the UK, Mike has toured both coasts of America with Call Mr Robeson, culminating in the February 2012 performance at Carnegie Hall with Tayo. Mike also performs in another two-hander, a Jazz drama God Bless the Child about Billie Holliday. He plays regularly as soloist and with Swing and Function bands at weddings, other celebrations and at corporate events. Mike also teaches piano to aspiring Pop, Blues and Jazz musicians and to singer/song writers.
