

CALL MR. ROBESON: A life, with songs.

Written and Performed by Tayo Aluko, with Michael Conliffe, Piano

Tristan Bates Theatre, Covent Garden, London, Saturday 12 October, 2013.

Greetings, and Welcome. Immigration is in the news again, with the sad stories of scores of Africans drowning trying to get into Europe by boat. The Maltese Prime Minister is talking of the Mediterranean becoming a cemetery and calling for action by the European Union to increase search and rescue missions in the area. All too often however, we hear stories of unspeakable cruelty toward prospective immigrants, both out at sea and on land, the closest to home being at Yarl's Wood Detention Camp here in the UK. In the USA, the stories are even more horrific, with allegations of shoot-to-kill policies operating along certain points of the border with Mexico. The issue is so inflammatory and sensitive that entire political careers are built and sometimes lost on it and some parties have that as their very raison d'être. Yet, they keep coming, the would-be migrants, to the consternation of many natives. It might be interesting for them to take a step back to ask why so many people would risk their lives to make the arduous journey to a hostile, cold country? It can be summarised by the way the world economic system ensures that the ability to live comfortably, decently and peacefully, is made extremely hard for the majority of the world's population. Things are rigged to the benefit of people in the West, where life is much easier and the grass seemingly grows greener. Even if, for selfish reasons, it might be worth considering ways of making life better for people elsewhere in order to stop them from wanting to come here. If, for example, our leaders stop exporting arms with which tyrannical regimes oppress their people, and instead trade internationally in ways that ensure that goods and services are exchanged for mutual benefit of their peoples, meaning that everywhere people have access to decent housing, education and health care, perhaps they would much more likely stay at home. Is that possible? Many people have thought so for centuries, but are usually considered revolutionaries – Paul Robeson included. As life starts to get progressively harder for the majority, perhaps more will start to think that way too, and join others who fight for a fairer society here and abroad. I hope you enjoy the show.

Tayo Aluko. Writer, Performer. Tayo was born in Nigeria, and now lives in Liverpool. He worked previously as an architect and property developer, with a special, but frustrated, interest in eco-friendly construction. He has fronted orchestras as baritone soloist in British concert halls and has also performed lead roles in such operas and musicals as Nabucco, Kiss Me Kate and Anything Goes. CALL MR ROBESON won three awards at the London Ontario Fringe in June 2012 and Best Solo Show at the Stratford UK Fringe this June. He has performed the play around the UK, Canada, Nigeria, Jamaica and the USA (including New York's Carnegie Hall in February 2012). His other piece titled FROM BLACK AFRICA TO THE WHITE HOUSE - a talk about Black Political Resistance, illustrated with Spirituals, has also been performed on three continents. He researched, wrote and narrated to camera a piece on West African History before the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade, which forms part of the permanent exhibit at Liverpool's International Slavery Museum. His 15-minute play, HALF MOON, which also deals with ancient Africa, has been performed several times in the UK.

Michael Conliffe, Piano and original incidental music.

Mike started playing piano by ear as child, playing Gospel in church and later discovering Jazz, which he went on to study at Liverpool Community College and Leeds College of Music. As well as playing regularly in Jazz festivals round the UK, Mike has toured both coasts of America with Call Mr Robeson, culminating in the February 2012 performance at Carnegie Hall with Tayo. Mike also performs in another two-hander, a Jazz drama God Bless the Child about Billie Holliday. He plays regularly as soloist and with Swing and Function bands at weddings, other celebrations and at corporate events. Mike also teaches piano to aspiring Pop, Blues and Jazz musicians and to singer/song writers.
