

CALL MR. ROBESON: A life, with songs.

Written and Performed by Tayo Aluko, with Michael Conliffe, Piano

Tristan Bates Theatre, Covent Garden, London, Thursday 17 October, 2013.

Greetings, and Welcome. Earlier today, I went in costume to march alongside the teachers who held a one-day strike, marched through central London and had a large rally not far from the Education Secretary's office. It had been jointly organised by the two largest teaching unions, "Protecting Teachers, Defending Education". The following quote can be found on a major news website: "[Our] reporter ... saw hundreds of teachers march past Parliament earlier". That would suggest that there wasn't much support for the action from the profession. This is strange because at the end of the rally, we were told that the end of the march had just passed a point about a mile and a half away. Also, the same website said that thousands of schools were expected to have been closed today. As some placards stated, the maths doesn't add up: a few hundred teachers are able somehow to cause so much disruption that thousands of schools are closed, and therefore they should be seen as irresponsible, greedy trouble makers. They are expected to accept government interference, increased workloads, longer careers, less pay and reduced pensions and be grateful that they are employed at all in these hard times. As they marched past the Department of Education, they were cheered on by flag-waving members of other unions who had taken time off to show their support. At the rally, they received messages of solidarity from the Fire Brigades Union and the Communication Workers Union (both of whom have announced/had their own strikes recently) and other unions. Still, if the media are to be believed, this was nothing more than an irritating storm in a tea cup, and certainly not headline news. It is at times like this that one is reminded to be suspicious of the media, and to give some credence to those who suggest that it is in the hands of an elite who wish to minimise the amount of truth the populace gets. The image of Paul Robeson in the eyes of many was always one of a naive, misguided non-patriot, and not what he really was – a person who felt that workers of the world needed to unite in order to protect themselves and their families from the bosses' greed. He had no hesitation in taking sides, and would have urged the rest of us to do the same. I hope you enjoy the show.

Tayo Aluko. Writer, Performer. Tayo was born in Nigeria, and now lives in Liverpool. He worked previously as an architect and property developer, with a special, but frustrated, interest in eco-friendly construction. He has fronted orchestras as baritone soloist in British concert halls and has also performed lead roles in such operas and musicals as Nabucco, Kiss Me Kate and Anything Goes. His other piece titled FROM BLACK AFRICA TO THE WHITE HOUSE - a talk about Black Political Resistance, illustrated with Spirituals, has also been performed on three continents. He researched, wrote and narrated to camera a piece on West African History before the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade, which forms part of the permanent exhibit at Liverpool's International Slavery Museum. His 15-minute play, HALF MOON, which also deals with ancient Africa, has been performed several times in the UK.

Michael Conliffe, Piano and original incidental music.

Mike started playing piano by ear as child, playing Gospel in church and later discovering Jazz, which he went on to study at Liverpool Community College and Leeds College of Music. As well as playing regularly in Jazz festivals round the UK, Mike has toured both coasts of America with Call Mr Robeson, culminating in the February 2012 performance at Carnegie Hall with Tayo. Mike also performs in another two-hander, a Jazz drama God Bless the Child about Billie Holiday.
