

CALL MR. ROBESON: A life, with songs.

Written and Performed by Tayo Aluko, with Michael Conliffe, Piano

Tristan Bates Theatre, Covent Garden, London, Saturday 26 October, 2013.

Greetings, and Welcome. It was down the road in Drury Lane that Paul Robeson burst into stardom in Showboat in 1928. It was presumably also somewhere nearby that he first got an indication of the extremes of wealth and poverty in British society that would start him on the journey to becoming the most notable modern example of that rare breed: successful artist and passionate social campaigner. That breed remains as rare today, and income differences as large, and were he to return and walk the streets of London today, he probably wouldn't need to go far from here to encounter food banks. The people queueing for food would be of all races and colours, and would include natives and immigrants. Many of those will be from what is known as "The Third World", but many would also be from nearby metropolises which were themselves seats of vast or smaller empires centuries or decades ago – Greece, Portugal and Spain for example. The forces that were unleashed in the middle of the last millennium that would lead first to the largest enforced migrations of peoples across the world and then to the modern European imperialism are now affecting hundreds of thousands of ordinary people in the very countries that benefited from the untold wealth generated at the expense of the forced labour of people thousands of miles away. The effects of those forces are also being felt on these shores, starkly demonstrated only yesterday when workers at Grangemouth petrochemical plant in Scotland were forced to accept significantly inferior working conditions from their wealthy employers, just to ensure they can stay in employment. The food banks Robeson would encounter nearby would also include nationals from conflict-torn parts of the world seeking refuge in a place where it is often difficult for the indigenes to understand that their own governments, economies, lifestyles and arms industries contribute in large measure to the strife in the countries from whence the immigrants flee. The inaugural Paul Robeson Art Is A Weapon Festival which ends today has shown many how easily and effectively Art can be used (to quote Robeson) as a weapon in struggle, for it communicates information and humanity across borders, and can therefore be dangerous – to oppressors. The struggle continues.

Tayo Aluko. Writer, Performer. Tayo was born in Nigeria, and now lives in Liverpool. He worked previously as an architect and property developer, with a special, but frustrated, interest in eco-friendly construction. He has fronted orchestras as baritone soloist in British concert halls and has also performed lead roles in such operas and musicals as Nabucco, Kiss Me Kate and Anything Goes. CALL MR ROBESON won three awards at the London Ontario Fringe in June 2012 and Best Solo Show at the Stratford UK Fringe this June. He has performed the play around the UK, Canada, Nigeria, Jamaica and the USA (including New York's Carnegie Hall in February 2012). His other piece titled FROM BLACK AFRICA TO THE WHITE HOUSE - a talk about Black Political Resistance, illustrated with Spirituals, has also been performed on three continents. He researched, wrote and narrated to camera a piece on West African History before the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade, which forms part of the permanent exhibit at Liverpool's International Slavery Museum. His 15-minute play, HALF MOON, which also deals with ancient Africa, has been performed several times in the UK.

Michael Conliffe, Piano and original incidental music.

Mike started playing piano by ear as child, playing Gospel in church and later discovering Jazz, which he went on to study at Liverpool Community College and Leeds College of Music. As well as playing regularly in Jazz festivals round the UK, Mike has toured both coasts of America with Call Mr Robeson, culminating in the February 2012 performance at Carnegie Hall with Tayo. Mike also performs in another two-hander, a Jazz drama God Bless the Child about Billie Holiday. He plays regularly as soloist and with Swing and Function bands at weddings, other celebrations and at corporate events. Mike also teaches piano to aspiring Pop, Blues and Jazz musicians and to singer/song writers.
