

CALL MR. ROBESON: A life, with songs.

Written and Performed by Tayo Aluko, with Roland Perrin, Piano
Stanley Halls, South Norwood, London. Friday November 24, 2017

Greetings, Welcome. They say it is a sign of madness when you repeat something over and over again, expecting to get a different result. Capitalism is clearly not working - for the many, certainly. One very good illustration of this is the housing crisis, but in the recent budget, all that was offered were promises to build more houses for sale, accompanied by some changes to stamp duty in order help first-time buyers. An expansion of social housing is clearly an idea too far, as it begins to resemble Socialism, and we can't have that, can we? We won't know until we try it, and that hasn't been tried here for decades, and certainly not during the last Labour administration. However, indications are that people here in the UK are showing a real hunger for it under Corbyn's Labour. In the US, a self-declared Socialist, despite his huge popularity, was robbed of the chance to become their president, and instead we have who we have. Paul Robeson was part of earlier attempts to adopt Democratic Socialism there, but by his time the juggernaut against that idea was already approaching full speed. He campaigned for its adoption in African colonies, including then Rhodesia, and had he still been alive, he would have rejoiced with everybody else when they finally won their independence. A few decades later, change has come to Zimbabwe again, but we have the American experience of nine years ago to remind us that saying so over and over again during election campaigns is not enough – not by a long shot. The jubilation that follows Mugabe's departure will only lead to disappointment and maybe even disaster unless it is accompanied by efforts to ensure that true Socialism is given a chance to emerge there for once. The scenes on the Zimbabwean streets in the last fortnight suggest that like here, in the US and in many other places, the people are really hungry for that kind of change. Among those rejoicing and making overtures for a new Zimbabwe are arms dealers, multinationals and other kinds of capitalists; and as they say, a leopard can't change its spots. If one sees what looks like a rock offering a stepping stone across a river, one would be wise to check that it isn't really a crocodile hungry for its next meal. I hope you enjoy the show.

Tayo Aluko. Writer, Performer. Tayo was born in Nigeria, and now lives in Liverpool, where he worked previously as an architect. He has fronted orchestras as baritone soloist in concert halls, and has also performed lead roles in such operas and musicals as Nabucco, Kiss Me Kate and Anything Goes. CALL MR ROBESON has won numerous awards at festivals in the UK and Canada, and he has toured the play around the UK, the USA, Canada, Jamaica and Nigeria, including New York's Carnegie Hall in 2012.
